

ALL UNITE IN PRAISE OF The Record-Herald's Home Study Circle Library.

W. S. ELLIOTT, JR.

"I have been greatly interested and informed by reading the volumes of the Home Study Circle Library. This splendid curriculum of universal instruction cannot be too generally introduced to the attention of our people. Those whose opportunity for a liberal education has been limited will find in this library a vast fountain of indispensable knowledge, while those who have been more generously favored will find the scope of their intellectual attainments greatly extended by a studious review of the miscellaneous learning here collated. I have found it profitable upon numerous occasions to call the attention of the students of my family to its meritorious chapters. I hope the work may find ready access to all of our homes."

JOHN R. NEWCOMER.

"It gives me pleasure to commend The Record-Herald's Home Circle Library will benefit tens of thousands and render them real assistance in attaining a higher plane and a greater success in life."

DR. H. W. THOMAS.

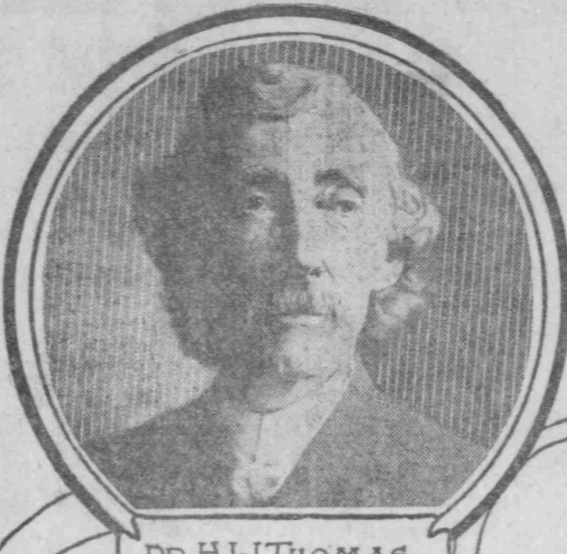

"The Record-Herald's Home Study Library means the public schools and teachers, the college professors and library carried into the homes of the people. The value to old and young is incalculable."

REV. DR. P. S. HENSON.

The Record-Herald's Home Circle Library, comprising as it does in 16 volumes delightful and informing treatises on the world's literature, its governments, its history, its great scientists, musicians and artists, its up-to-date science, is a work that can scarcely be too highly praised. Its clearly printed and beautifully illustrated pages feast the eyes, while its style and subject matter alike fascinate and instruct the reader. This splendid work meets a long-felt popular want."

"The educational value of the Home Study Circle Library cannot be overestimated. The wide scope of its plan to popularize knowledge, and the high qualifications of the distinguished thinkers and scholars who have contributed to the realization of its design make it a remarkable illustration of practical University Extension for the great masses of the people."

I. KEIM.

"To the millions of probing people in search of knowledge and particularly to those to whom the doors of our great temples of learning have been closed or who could not enter because driven by the necessities of life to the harder knocks of the knuckles, I recommend The Record-Herald's Home Study Circle Library. It fills the much needed want. By enlightening yourselves you enlighten our country, our America."

HARRY OLSON.

"I am familiar with The Record-Herald's Home Circle Library. It would be a valuable addition to the library of any one, no matter what his educational opportunities or achievements, but it is of special value to those who have not had the advantages of the higher schools. A careful reading of the books of this library will lay the foundation for further advancement by creating a desire in the reader for good books."

"The Record-Herald's Home Circle Library furnishes practical courses of instruction to those who have not had the benefit of a collegiate education, and the information is conveyed in a simple and clear manner as to bring it within the easy comprehension of people of the most ordinary acquirements. The work is most useful and its influence cannot but be good."

Rev. F. W. GUNSAULUS.

"I can congratulate the Home Study Circle Library Association upon its success. You have a great idea and have worked to noble accomplishments. We see the excellent result in the inspired and teachable young men and women who come to us after having been awakened in this way."

Rev. JAMES W. FIFIELD.

"Books are life powers. Among safeguards of our young people we must name the libraries of the homes. Let them be full of choice works and the homes will be happier, holier, safer. The Record-Herald's Home Circle Library may well be in the homes of those who wish noble, helpful reading. I commend it to those who desire acquaintance with present day thought from most gifted men."
